END DAYS

A Note From Our Artistic Director

Welcome to End Days. We end our 29th Cal Rep season with a dark comedy about... the end of the world! I worked with the playwright Deborah Zoe Laufer at the O'Neill Theater Center in Connecticut and I have always adored her work. Her plays have lots of humor and heart. And her plays often tackle thorny subjects – End Days weaves together tensions between science and religion, reason and faith. Deborah recently said, “A lot of my plays deal with where science and religion bump up against each other. I’m just fascinated by what people believe....In most of my plays, people are searching for something by looking outside themselves and their family and loved ones and friends. And ultimately, the characters find what they’re looking for in each other and the simple acts of being together, eating together, playing games, spending time with the people who actually matter.” That encapsulates End Days: a beautiful play about facing one’s fears, coming together as a family and bonding through the “simple acts of them being together.”
